Zotero integration for citations
Elisha James King composed "Bound for Canaan" in three parts (tenor, bass, and treble) and contributed the revival chorus to the 1844 first edition of The Sacred Harp. The song appeared on page 82, where it remained unchanged during successive nineteenth-century revisions of the tunebook. "Bound for Canaan" is a perennially popular song, often used to open all-day singings from The Sacred Harp.

John Leland authored five common meter double stanzas of this popular hymn in 1793.

Elisha James King was The Sacred Harp's "junior" author, co-compiling the tunebook in 1844 with Benjamin Franklin White. He was born in 1821 in East Georgia to parents John King and Elizabeth Dubose. He moved with his parents to West Georgia's Talbot County in 1828. As a young adult, King farmed with his family and taught singing schools. In A Brief History of the Sacred Harp, Joseph Stephen James credits White with training King in music (129–30). King died on August 31, 1844, just after work on The Sacred Harp had been completed.

Wilson Marion Cooper added an alto part to "Bound for Canaan" in his 1902 revision of The Sacred Harp. This uncredited alto part, likely arranged by Seaborn McDaniel Denson, is nearly identical to Cooper's alto.
